

January 7, 2022

Burst water pipes, snow, the Omicron variant, and other factors are challenges we face as we start a new calendar year. It certainly isn't how we wanted to start the new year, but as we talk with students about perseverance this month, it allows us to model that character trait. An essential part of perseverance is staying focused on your ultimate goals and making sure decisions are tailored toward achieving those goals. The strategic planning process we are beginning this month will help us clarify our goals as a district and a community. We hope everyone will take advantage of opportunities to make their voices heard as we progress through the various stages of the strategic planning process.

In addition to the notes above, I want to wish everyone a Happy New Year! I am looking forward to the work ahead and the opportunity to meet more parents and community members in person as we advance through 2022.
