Building on a Tradition

For five decades, the MHS yearbook staff has held the Wagon Trails Revue as a way to showcase school talent as well as raise money for the annual book. While a long history like that may sound like the event has become boring or repetitive, that's definitely not the case.

Randy Taylor

This year's Revue featured group performances, soloists, and of course yearbook staff members who simply knocked it out of the park. The performances were top notch, the event's coordination made everything go off

Spotlight on STEM

Mooreville teachers and students were honored Tuesday as a group from the national Project Lead the Way STEM (Science Technology Engineering and Math) curriculum program visited MHS, PHMS and Northwood Elementary.

Visitors talked with students and a panel of teachers and administrators about how Mooreville integrated the programs into school curriculum and how students are responding to the integrated curriculum. Students from kindergarten through seniors in advanced placement classes showed off their work.

flawlessly, and the auditorium atmosphere was absolutely electric.

I want to send special kudos to MHS yearbook advisor Ada Clark, choir director Jason Damron, orchestra director Arie Schreibman, dance team coach Genevieve George, and band director Jason Freeman for their leadership as well as to their students for great work.

I've spent many years attending school performances, and this was an absolute slam dunk.
